David Flaherty has an international reputation in the Ju-Jitsu world. Throughout the years David has received an MBE, risen through the ranks in Ju-Jitsu and has taken martial arts to police and military units.

A sensei or teacher in Ju-Jitsu, he received an MBE from the queen 21 years ago for his dedication and work. "Also I took Ju-Jitsu and Systema to police and Military units". The international representative for the WJJKO- GB dedicates his time to helping those with disabilities. He has written an article about helping people with PTSD and Depression and he developed a special syllabus for people with disabilities.

As international director of coaching he is a Kudan, 9th degree Dan, and spends some of his time grading and helping others progress to another level. While grading students, he helps them to progress and offers tips on how to improve. He stated;" I expect that people have put the time and effort into it."

David Flaherty aims to write a book on personal protection in the future and hopes that it will help people. He has many titles to go along with his dedication to the country and the martial arts. These include: chief coach of the Cheshire budo federation, country representative for the WJJKO-GB, So Shihan, Dai Soke, international director of coaching, Systema instructor and is the president of Europe and international vice president for his martial art to go along with his MBE.

David Flaherty has dedicated his career to helping veterans and the disabled community to learn personal protection of one form or another.
