

The Great YouTube War

Date: Thursday 14 March 2018

The Indian company also known as T-series is overtaking the most subscribed YouTube channel called Pewdiepie, also known as Felix, who has ruled YouTube over the years.

Out of nowhere came T-series, another YouTube channel, which has had a massive growth in subscribers making people wonder how they got them. Although the T-Series fan base is NOT entirely made out of bots, there are some which add Subscribers helping T-Series gain progress. Bots are Artificial Intelligence which is often used to create other YouTube accounts to subscribe to the user. This is obvious as T-Series gets a lot of subscribers but not many views on their videos.

Pewdiepie does not use sub bots, but is gaining a lot of fans by YouTubers advertising his channel and helping him push the sub gap higher. This YouTube war will stop when one of them will be the first one to gain 100 million subs. Pewdiepie is trying to prove that the YouTube community can help each other and that they can do amazing things like this. At the moment there both around 89.3 million subscribers but Pewdiepie is a few thousand subscribers above T-series.

The T-series staff have never reacted to the situation and they keep going up without noticing all the fuss going on YouTube. Felix (Pewdiepie) does not want to make this a serious thing and always tells his subscribers to not take this too seriously. Social media users are supporting both sides but are mostly supporting Pewdiepie. The reason everyone is on Felix's side is because he is one individual fighting a whole Millionaire Indian company with a lot of staff.

We interviewed some of the year nine Whitecross students about what they think about the T-series Vs Pewdiepie. 45/50 students chose Pewdiepie, winning with a majority of people. An Indian channel supporting T-Series said: "Maybe it's time for us to take over YouTube". However, a student at Whitecross High school said: "I think Pewdiepie should win because I supported Pewdiepie since the beginning!"

This feud is not going to last forever. There can only be one winner, one YouTube king – arguments still continue about who deserves this title.
